WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 23.—An improvement in conditions in industrial and commercial regions of the country has come, reviving trade and destroying alarm, resulting in a reduction of some of the participants were the principal charges made against the militiamen by the dozen witnesses introduced by the Western Federation of Miners.

When the strikers conclude presentation of their case, which probably will be tomorrow or Wednesday, an opportunity will be given the representatives of the National guard to reply to the charges.

Charles H. Tanner, auditor of the Western Federation of Miners expects to appear before the committee tomorrow and relate the circumstances surrounding the deportation of Charles H. Moyer.

Describe Encounters.

Many of the incidents described today had been told before Capt. Frank Blackman of Company L, from Jackson, who accused of brutal treatment by two witnesses Tom Stephanian and the captain gave him a black eye in an encounter between 200 striking miners and soldiers at Clarendon on September 11 last and William Palmer accused the officer of striking a woman sympathizer across the shoulders with his saber at Tammerick, Ill., on Sept. 10.

Palmette declared that women and children were crying "Begs" at the moment when Captain Blackman and six soldiers were escorting home from work. When another woman yelled "Coward" at the officer, he tearing off part of her waist. He said a third woman was struck by a soldier with the butt of his rifle and injured.

Called Mexico "Names."

Was it the custom to wait for the men returning from work, and to call names?" asked Maj. S. W. Pepper. "Yes," the witness replied. "I did it myself," he added.

Witnesses told of parades at Calumet and Mohawk which they said had been stopped by the soldiers. Frank Kline said that during a Calumet strike a guard had broken the staff of the American flag with a baton and another had punctured it with his bayonet. As for Benton he said he was at

President Wilson Reviews
Civic and Military
Parade in Snow

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—President Wilson crossed the ice-floated Potomac today in the naval yacht Sybil, and from a glass-enclosed stand reviewed a civic and military parade in Alexandria, Va., which marched through a frigid snow storm in honor of the first president of the United States.

With the exception of brief exercises in the Senate, the national capital was on the verge of demobilization to-day, with a minimum local temperature of 12 degrees and a snowfall of only five and a half inches. Completion of schedules between St. Louis and Chicago may be expected to-morrow, according to railway officials.

After a sharp skirmish between the various attorneys, the committee barreled further evidence on the subject, reserving the right to return upon the constitutional issues involved.

Military authorities said tonight that at the conclusion of the testimonies for the strikers and the operators they would make a motion to expunge from the record all evidence relating to alleged disorder and depredations charged against the soldiers. The motion will be made on the ground that such evidence has no bearing upon the subjects the committee is authorized to investigate. If the motion is denied the militia authority say they will ask permission to introduce a large amount of testimony in refutation of the charges.

Asked for M. O.: Get Draft

Among the witnesses for the strikers this afternoon was Emilio Valentino, a Toledo shoemaker at Segundo. He testified that he had asked for money orders at the Segundo postoffice and had been given drafts signed by the Colorado Supply company, a subsidiary

Boy Scouts Trudge Along

Boy scouts trudged through the snow with the same tenacity as the soldiers while the blizzard raged. Little girls in a covered float showed a school room in Washington's time. On a blackboard was a drawing of the White house, which announced the presidential party. Here and there by the parades were a black-robed minister, a woman load of equal suffrage banners and some Indian in grotesque Indian garb. It seemed somewhat hazardous trip for the president to make in view of his erythema to cold, but he was a excellent leader and arrangements were well in their exposure. What was the minimum?

MISS C. E. BENNE: A moving picture actress who, with Roman Law, the daredevil who has performed many hair-raising stunts for the moving picture cameras, made a parachute leap from the Williamsburg bridge in New York, is none the worse for her thrilling experience. Law was injured, it is said. The pair eluded the police, and while the "movie" cameras clicked away on a tugboat beneath, the leap was made.

Socializing the Church

From the Philadelphia North American:

Levitt returned from a tour of the world in the interest of missionary work. Fred P. Smith, who will be remembered as campaign leader in the Men and Religion Forward movement, said to an interviewer: "The church is not winning as it should win in America."

No man in the nation is better qualified to express an opinion on this subject. As manager of the great inter-denominational movement mentioned, he studied conditions in every part of the country. Himself a "militant evangelist," he would be apt to shoot over rather than under the mark in gauging the progress of the church. "It is not winning as it should," is his verdict.

Such a statement from a source so authoritative lends added interest to the recent declaration by Winston Churchill, the noted novelist, that the last decade has seen a turn in the tide of skepticism.

In a discussion of "The Modern Quest for a Religion," which this widely-read author contributed to the December number of the Century magazine, and which is based upon an idea he first delivered in one of the most conservative Protestant Episcopal churches on the Pacific coast and later before the University of California, he says:

"For those who have ever seen an eagle to bear I think there can be no question that the world is not as skeptical about spiritual things as formerly. It was 10 years ago, if not even five years ago, I had in my mind a question which I had never been willing to admit that here is an aspect of this extra century age which cannot be accounted for in the old Memphis."

In the extreme east, however, the novelist means to indicate a significant portion of the people are still as far from the heart of the new great spiritual race.

We want to give you news.

What then? We do not know.

For an hour or two, the world is equally held spellbound by the new reflection of light to a third person. He is a Raymond Roche, the well-known churchman and a worker who accompanied Mr. Smith on his trip around the world. Speaking of religious conditions in this country, recently he said:

"It is strange that some of the anti-social forces in the world, we believe, are the churchmen. They reflect the world to a third person. Note. He is a Raymond Roche, the well-known churchman and a worker who accompanied Mr. Smith on his trip around the world. Speaking of religious conditions in this country, recently he said:

"It is strange that some of the anti-social forces in the world, we believe, are the churchmen. They reflect the world to a third person. Note. He is a Raymond Roche, the well-known churchman and a worker who accompanied Mr. Smith on his trip around the world. Speaking of religious conditions in this country, recently he said:

his congregation by attempting to socialize his church.

Behind every form of government ever devised under the sun there is a form of religion which fits it and inspires it," says Mr. Churchill in the article mentioned. "Despotism had its religion of superstition and fear; democracy has its religion of universal education and of individual responsibility, which means that there must be no organization or intermediaries between ourselves and our God. If we don't believe in democracy we shall have difficulty in finding for ourselves a country in this world as is shaping it today."

We want a religion

Whither we turn for it? The religion we choose must contain a positive, militant righteousness. And it must not be a righteousness which has to do only with our own soul; it must also have a social meaning. In other words, it must have in a democracy something to do with the state. If this be so let us call this positive righteousness the new patriotism.

Declaring that any religion out of harmony with this new patriotism would be violence to our deepest instincts, he thus outlines the social meaning of his suggestion:

First it involves for the man or woman who has adopted it heart and soul a change in the motive of life. The old motive in government lies in the acquisition of property, the new lies in service. This is not to say that in imperfect world we should not a wise and bold project, but that's not the right sub-scheme that in this it is less and higher one. And when we look at the types which are the extreme expressions of all motives we see that the first tends to make a man of character, a Tweed, with the second produces a personality like Miss Jane Adams of Chicago. This sense of duty is aided by personal religion. For example, in the best work, the best work, the best in all the best kinds of life.

Secondly, it involves for the man or woman who has adopted it heart and soul a social and militant righteousness. It is by no means a gentle religion. It is a religion in a keen edge, the bluntest and sharpest.

It seeks to put into government maximum, maximum in brotherhood.

Third, a striking note of the new patriotism is openness-mindedness, teachableness, and hence capacity for growth. Its greatest enemies are those with closed minds, the pharisees of the material world, who maintain that others are best as they are, nothing else in them; then neither effort nor labor is needed to go in front.

Fourth, the new patriotism may indicate the principle of individual worth and the leads logically the new divine suffrage to individual responsibilities and democracy.

We must in government trust more in God, trust in the divine scheme. Then shall love thy neighbor as thyself.

And fifth, in the new patriotism we begin to recognize at last that man cannot live by bread alone. It is ever word that precedeth out the "loaf of God." We realize that it would not be sufficient to give the Word of John the Logos, life's bread and salvation.

Do the new patriotic men

HEELING, W. Va., Feb. 23.—A decided improvement in conditions in the industrial and commercial regions of the country has come, reviving trade and destroying alarm, resulting in a reduction of tariff duties has resulted in industry clearly and openly in the direction of a reduction in the cost of food and clothing, and climatic conditions, not business depression, are responsible for the number of unemployed in New York city and other industrial centers.

This was the message delivered tonight by William C. Redfield, the administration's spokesman on commercial and industrial problems before the Wheeling board of trade. Every statement he made was fortified by official statistics and reports.

Defends Tariff Act.

Redfield defended the tariff act, defended the currency law, and, with decided emphasis, assured his audience that the government intends to help, not hinder legitimate business. It was not strange that the serious depression all over Europe as well as in South America should have been reflected upon us in the latter part of last year," he said. "It is not surprising that careful men moved cautiously in business matters pending the necessary real adjustments from a new tariff or that they should be hesitated until the final shape of the currency bill was known." "It is strange either that men should want to 'abuse' the actions of the government toward legitimate business. But there is no ground here now for any. The surplus of freight cars has ceased to grow. It commenced about the middle of January to decline and decreased by about 5,000 cars. It would be easy to add from numerous sources to these favorable statements have found in the last fortnight the ports of improving business so many and general that it has been impossible for me to consider them all."

Living Cost Slumps.

The tendency is clearly and openly the direction of a reduction in the cost of food and clothing through the removal of the tariff tax. It may be well to point out, however, that the only process of distribution by a tremendous tax upon our consumers, and that in my judgment the single and little discussed factor of carriage now lays a heavier burden upon our people than the total amount paid for all our freight.

The new tariff has not thus far resulted in any material increase of exports of manufactured articles to compete with the products of our own factories, but rather its important effect has been to add to our food supply.

It remains to discuss briefly two other elements of the existing situation—the prices of commodities and the matter of unemployment. During the winter months thousands of laborers are thrown out of work for climatic reasons in all our northern states and it is normal that they should congregate as far east past the mountains in our large cities and industrial centers. Statements have been made and denied to the effect that there were more unemployed in New York this year than usual. This may TRINIDAD, Feb. 23.—A direct admission by Capt. W. H. Danks, that the Colorado National guard in the strike zone has arrested and detained men as military prisoners, today removed the question of alleged unconstitutional imprisonment from the realm of fact to that of judicial interpretation. The house investigating committee barred further testimony on that subject. Representative Barnes explaining that the members would decide for themselves whether the facts admitted by Captain Danks constitute an infringement of constitutional rights.

"We will consult the decisions of the supreme court on the subject," he added.

Military authorities said tonight that the decision of the supreme court upon which they relied was that in the famous Moyer case. This decision recently guided District Judge A. W. McHendrie in holding that military impoundments were legal.

Describe Encounters.

Many of the incidents described today had been told before Capt. Frank Blackman of company I, from whom Jackson was accused of brutal treatment to two witnesses. Tony Stephen said the captain gave him a black eye in an encounter between 200 marching strikers and soldiers at Calumet on September 12 last, and William Palmer accused the officer of striking a woman sympathizer across the shoulder with his rifle on September 8.

Palmer declared that women and children were crying "Scab" at four hundred men whom Captain Blackman and six soldiers were escorting home from work. When another woman called "Coward" at the officer, the witness said Blackman grabbed her, tearing off part of her waist. He said a third woman was struck by a soldier with the butt of his rifle and injured.

Was it the custom to wait for the men returning from work, and to call them "Scab"?" asked Mrs. E. W. Peppar.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 22.—Democrats of Kansas met here today, discussed the welfare of the party in state and nation and adopted a tentative platform containing paragraphs in favor of government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines, the initiation of parcel post, a minimum wage for women, a mother's compensation law, compulsory grain inspection, child welfare legislation and extension of mine rescue work.

The platform landed the administration of President Wilson. It also contained an invitation for the women of Kansas to join the Democratic party.

of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company.

Fred Herrington, for the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, told the committee that the company formerly issued drafts at mine camp stores, but that the practice had been stopped. "I don't think we have violated any postal regulations," he explained.

J. F. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, said he had stopped the practice of selling drafts on company stores as soon as he learned that it might be a violation of postal regulations.

Civil Courts Open All White.

J. M. Hendrick, deputy district attorney, was called by the strikers to testify that since the calling of the strike the civil courts had been open for business at all times. Questioned as to whether or not his official work had been interfered with at the time of the arrival of the militia, he said he had received a telephonic communication from General John Chase, threatening to arrest the district attorney and the two deputies employed in the office. The alleged threat of arrest, he said, was occasioned by the release of four men whom he said General Chase claimed as military prisoners.

The witness quoted General Chase as saying: "Why in --- can't you play this game straight? What do you mean by releasing my military prisoners? I have a good notion to send out and arrest the whole --- outfit."

John Vicedetti, blacksmith, formerly employed in the shop of the Colorado & Wyoming railroad at Segundo, told the committee that he had been discharged for union activity.

Vincenzo Spino of Walsenburg testified that he had been brought to Colorado from Pittsburgh to work in the coal mines. His story was similar to those of the other so-called neophyte witnesses. He said he ran away from Delagua, but was stopped by militiamen at Hastings, further down the canyon.

SITUATION IN MEXICO NEAR CRISIS, BELIEF

pass on to Great Britain the facts as found without indicating any judgment at all, is considered by some diplomats as a likely course. Steps to procure better protection for Eng.-ish nationals than are expected to follow and it is the feature of the case which is provoking a discussion on the part of the United States which might express itself on the subject of protection to foreigners.

May Urge Nationals to Leave.
That Great Britain might urge her subjects to leave Mexico, as did this government, is considered plausible.

The American government feels a peculiar sense of obligation in connection with the safety of foreigners in northern Mexico, having assured those nations which had no consular representative there that the Washington government would exercise a watchful eye in their behalf.

That this does not involve direct responsibility was made clear today by Sir Edward Grey at London, and in some quarters tonight the sending of Charles Alexander Percival, British consul at Galveston, Tex., to El Paso was regarded as a move calculated to relieve the American government to some extent of this task in the section around Juarez.

The British embassy explained that Consul Percival was sent to El Paso primarily to consult British refugees about the protection of their friends and property in northern Mexico. The embassy disclaimed any intention of interfering with the American investigation of the Benton episode. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice has been keeping in close touch with Secretary Bryan about details of Benton's execution and twice today inquiries for information about missing Englishmen were directed to the state department.

Diplomats on the Job.
Other members of the diplomatic corps are observing the situation and keeping their home governments informed, though no inquiries other than from Great Britain have as yet become known.

The state department makes a practice of keeping the diplomats here informed about any mention of their subjects in consular dispatches. Reports from Los Angeles today cast doubt upon the story that Roger Lawrence ever was in Mexico was used as an illustration by officials here of numerous inquiries about missing people, many of whom subsequently are found in other parts of the world.

The whole subject of protecting foreigners in Mexico was discussed to some extent by members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today. They have an understanding with senators particularly interested in the Mexican crisis that whatever discussion is desired shall take place in executive session.

No Recognition of Rebels.
The resolutions of Senators Fall and Clark of Wyoming, asking that the rights of Americans to protection in Mexico be emphasized and calling for a complete report on conditions in Mexico, are expected to be called up soon, but it will be referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for further consideration.

Considerable interest is manifest at the capitol in the future of the Constitutional movement and the possibilities of a stage being reached which might call for recognition of their belligerency. Asked about the probabilities of recognizing the Constitutionalists, Acting Chairman Shively of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the time had not arrived for consideration of the question. He said in response to a request from Mr. Gove he had sought out Anof Yamicelli as the man who had signed contracts for the other four Italians. He brought Yamicelli with the others, he declared. He denied that Yamicelli had any closer connection with the Constitutionalists than any of the other miners.

Tells of Search for Men.

The witness then was questioned about the manner in which Pietro and Vittorio Froio, Quintino Simoni and Leopardo Morelli were brought to Trinidad Saturday morning to appear as witnesses before the committee. He declared that he had talked with them about their testimony and that they were not influenced to give testimony favorable to the company. He said in response to a request from Mr. Gove he had sought out Anof Yamicelli as the man who had signed contracts for the other four Italians. He brought Yamicelli with the others, he declared. He denied that Yamicelli had any closer connection with the Constitutionalists than any of the other miners.

Tells of Search for Men.

The witness then was questioned about Giovanni Minnotti, the Italian who last week said he had escaped from the Delagua mine after being held prisoner. He said he had no knowledge of the alleged search of the Ludlow tent colony by the militia and the Delagua house boys after Minnotti's escape.

He admitted that at one time a company watchman took a miner out of a tree and brought him back to camp. He explained that the man was wanted for participating in a fight and was chased up the tree by a watchman's dog after he had refused to haul when walking out of the camp.

Mr. Snodgrass said he never had attempted to prevent Giovanni Minnotti leaving the camp. He said he never had seen the militia at the camp, "all drunk," and that none of them were intoxicated last Wednesday night when Minnotti said he made his escape over the hills. He declared that he never had seen, but one intoxicated man at the Delagua camp.

tacked at Mohawk while carrying the Stars and Stripes.

Jacob Kunlin testified that he was shot in the neck and knocked down by Jack Kendall, a deputy sheriff, while in a parade at Quincy, on December 11. On cross-examination, witness admitted that soldiers had stopped a fight between strikers and deputies.

Frank Stampfahar told the committee that one night, in the latter part of October, a soldier came to his home at Allouez and told him that if he saw him in a parade again he would shoot him. He said the soldier was drunk; but, on cross-examination, admitted the man was not too drunk to mount his horse.

Antone Papich said deputies had broken up a parade at Red Jacket on November 26, and several strikers had been beaten.

One deputy shot a man in Union hall, he said, and when Ben Goggia, a union organizer, protested, saying, "I don't see how you can shoot a man like that," he declared the deputy replied:

"We've got to do it for the C. & H."

A recent incident of the strike was narrated by Henry Hittata, who charged that he was searched without warrant last Friday by E. W. Walker, a mine superintendent, and a deputy sheriff. Afterwards he found that he had lost $5, he said. On cross-examination the witness said he did not think Walker took the money.

Chairman Taylor admitted into the record a petition presented to Major General Abbott by 172 citizens of Centennial Heights last autumn, protesting against the presence of militiamen and their alleged attacks on union men. It was argued by the committee that the charges would not be accepted as facts until substantiated by witness.

Original Reginers Play Real Ragtime at the Opera House

For those who enthuse over ragtime there is an act on the vaudeville bill at the Opera house this part of the week that will make them fairly radiate complete satisfaction for several days. The Six Musical Spillers is the name found on the program. And the six performers are ladies and gentlemen of culture.

Yesterday the performers found it hard to close. They responded with six or seven encores and a dozen bows. Then they gave another encore. And still the applause was almost deafening. But they invited the audience to "come back tomorrow" and disappeared not to be seen again.

Opening with a saxophone sextet, the performers quickly change to a marimba phone and two big xylophones, then again to cornets and trombones. Then singing and dancing occupy their attention for a moment. But they quickly change back to the instruments and by way of variety go through some clever steps while playing their own accompaniment. The Spillers agree with the idea advanced by some musicians that ragtime should be played slowly to get the proper symphonic tone, and that symphony must be the key-note to real ragtime. So in all their work there is the true rhythm of ragtime. One of the cleverest bits played yesterday was the Miserere, from the grand opera II Trovatore, set to ragtime. The Spillers stir and fascinate and should prove a great drawing card this week.

The Great LeRoy, escape artist, also proved interesting. His act is one piece of daring after another and his feats cause no little wonderment. Such stunts as freeing himself from a straightjacket while suspended by the feet in midair and escaping from numerous pairs of handcuffs and legirons while hanging by the neck are feats to be marveled at. LeRoy was well received, especially when he escaped from a Russian tortoise bed.

Walters and Claremont offer an operatic novelty which, while not extraordinary, is pleasing. The Mordell trio have a novelty dancing act that is fair. The male member gets not a few laughs with his extemporaneous singing. The bill as a whole is pleasing.

TAMPERING WITH THE TARIFF BILL IS ALLOWED

DR. FALKNER TO HEAD NAT'L CIVIC FEDERATION

Industrial and Social Survey Work Begun: Scope of Inquiry Is Broad

NEW YORK. Feb. 23.—With the selection of Dr. Roland P. Falkner, a statistician of worldwide fame as director, the projected survey of the industrial and social progress of the nation by the National Civic Federation is now under way. It was announced tonight by the executive committee in charge of the work.

The scope of the inquiry embrace labor conditions, immigration, pure food and drugs, agricultural, tenement house conditions, industrial loans, and savings, penal and correctional institutions, employers' welfare work, political ethics, social insurance, minimum wages, government ownership, law and order, judicial procedure, institutional church work, organized social service, educational opportunities and municipal government.

Whether the social movement of recent years has been in the direction of economic justice and at large human welfare or the reverse is the question which the inquiry seeks to determine.

Upon the answer to this vital question, says the committee's announcement, must depend the trend and form of our future public policy, alike with reference to the encouragement of wholesome tendencies, the rooting out of the survivals of unfit conditions and the correction of incidental abuses which have grown up amid our new and rapidly changing conditions.

The conclusion of the investigation will be in a charge of a subcommittee the chairman of which will include men of national prominence. Among them are former President Taft, Vincent Astor, August Belmont, Samuel Gompers, Alton R. Parker, Ogden Mills, George Perkins, Talbot Williams and James B. Reynolds. John Hays Hammond is chairman of the executive committee.

sequent to the private services which will be held in the Tyler home, W. S. Pickeral, grand master of the Colorado F. & A. M., will be in charge of the services.

Urge for Hall of Fame.

Today Governor Ammons, in a public statement, started a movement to have Colorado statesmen represented in the Hall of Fame at Washington, D. C., by a bust of Senator Teller. The state is entitled to two representations, and Governor Ammons, in his statement, declared that none other than that of Senator Teller would better represent the type of citizenship of Colorado and the West.

In 1876, with the admission of Colorado as a state into the Union, Senator Teller was chosen to represent the new state in the United States senate, and there he acted in that capacity for 30 years, both as Republican and Democrat. During President Arthur's administration, Senator Teller served as secretary of the interior, and there he fought for the policy which would open up the vast western territory to settlement and civilization; there he wrought the work of development, not only of Colorado but the western half of the nation.

Led Republican Bolt.

Always, in the senate, he stood for the advancement of the new country and, realizing its vast resources, had been active to bring his greatest influence to bear against the demonetization of silver. And it was in that effort that he declared in debate on the floor that the four silver producing states could not cooperate with the United States should the gold standard be adopted.

Fighting against the gold standard, Senator Teller made a stirring figure in the national Republican convention in St. Louis in 1888, when he led the bolt of Republicans after the gold standard platform had been adopted.

Concerning these incidents of his life, incidents which split progress for the nation and the west, Senator Teller seldom referred, and even though asked in his later days to compile notes for a biography, he replied, "No, my record is my life; I must stand or fall by that before posterity."

Senation of Senate."

Senator Teller's reputation became nationwide when he made his famous speech in debate in congress upon the repeal of the Sherman law which provided for the demonetization of silver. Then in course of one of the most sensational speeches ever given in the senate chamber, Senator Teller made his famous statement, known as "the sensation of the senate." He said:

"I say it in cool and calm deliberation, weighing well my words, that if the Republican party stands for the gold standard, the four silver producing states will not hereafter be able to act in cooperation with this [the United States] of any other body."

Was Power in Politics.

In the councils of the Republican party and subsequent to 1888 in the Democratic party, Senator Teller was a power. He bolted the Republican party during the convention in St. Louis, 1888, after the gold standard plank had been adopted. His actions in that convention won such respect for him in Colorado, that notwithstanding his renunciation of the Republican party, he was reelected to the United States senate, where he continued his work as one of the leaders of that body. One of the late senator's most ambitious commercial endeavor was the construction of the old Colorado Central railroad, a pioneer road through the extremely mountainous sections of the state. This road later was taken over by the Colorado & Southern railway and is in use today.

Senator Teller always told of his hardships in pushing that road through the mountains with a great degree of pleasure. It was his dream and with the aid of General Frederick D. Grant, who acted as engineer of the project, the dream was consummated. Senator Teller, even in his last days, never hesitated to give much credit to the work of "Fred, the son of my old friend, General U. S. Grant." Senator Teller was president of the Colorado Central railroad for five years.

Watched National Issues.

Keenly interested in political affairs, even though feeble ill, Senator Teller kept well informed of national conditions and during the last presidential election by his doctor, Dr. M. C. Moore, was reelected to the senate for a second term. He was a member of the committee on foreign relations, and representative in congress for one man to perform the duties of both, and proposed that Mr. Curley's seat be declared vacant.

It was recalled that Representative Lillie, after being elected governor of Connecticut some years ago, and General Joseph Wheeler of Alabama, after being commissioned a major general of volunteers in the Spanish war, tried unsuccessfully to hold their seats in congress.

Can Curley Be Mayor of Boston and Hold His Seat in Congress?

WASHINGTON. Feb. 23.—Whether James M. Curley, mayor of Boston and on the rolls of congress as a representative from the Twelfth Massachusetts district, shall be permitted to hold both offices was put up to a vote today by Republican Leader Mann. A resolution introduced by Mr. Mann set forth that "the office of mayor and representative in congress are incompatible, and it is impossible for one man to perform the duties of both," and proposed that Mr. Curley's seat be declared vacant.

It was recalled that Representative Lillie, after being elected governor of Connecticut some years ago, and General Joseph Wheeler of Alabama, after being commissioned a major general of volunteers in the Spanish war, tried unsuccessfully to hold their seats in congress.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Pour 24 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents) worth in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative. It is a valuable remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic bronchitis, bronchial asthma, and whooping cough.

The effect of pinex on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian pine juice extract, and is rich in guaiacum and other natural healing plant elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of sheet-like satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to the Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"CASCARETS" FOR COSTIVE BOWELS

Headache, sour stomach, biliousness and bloat gone by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Ballow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little innards need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

—WILLIAM WHITING, LECTURE

The following is from a letter from Miss Keller to the Outlook, concerning her article, "Blind Leaders," published in the magazine:

"When Mr. Booth read my essay, 'Blind Leaders,' he said to Mrs. Macy: 'It's all right; but people won't believe it.' Senator Teller forecast accurately the outcome, even to the bolt in the Chicago convention and the formation of a new party.

Senator Teller ranked high in Masonry. He was the first grand commander of Knights Templar of Colorado and for several years was grand master of the Colorado F. & A. M. He received his thirty-third degree in 1882, and was one of the oldest living thirty-third degree Masons in the United States.

Senator Teller would have celebrated his eighty-fourth anniversary May 28, and had lived almost 14 years longer than he always said had been his expectation. So strong was he in his belief that he declared in debate on the floor that the four silver producing states could not cooperate with the United States should the gold standard be adopted.

Fighting against the gold standard, Senator Teller made a stirring figure in the national Republican convention in St. Louis in 1888, when he led the bolt of Republicans after the gold standard platform had been adopted.

Concerning these incidents of his life, incidents which split progress for the nation and the west, Senator Teller seldom referred, and even though asked in his later days to compile notes for a biography, he replied, "No, my record is my life; I must stand or fall by that before posterity."

Sketch of His Life.

Henry Moore Teller on March 3, 1899, completed more than 30 years in the United States Senate, which was interrupted only by five years as secretary of the interior in the cabinet of President Arthur.

At that time Senator Teller expressed a desire to retire from public service in which a large part of his life had been spent. Subsequently he served as a member of the national monetary commission, created to investigate financial conditions in this and foreign countries and devise reforms in the banking and currency system of the United States.

Descended from anti-revolutionary stock, the founder of the family in America having crossed the Atlantic from Holland in 1649, Senator Teller was born in Allegany county, N. Y., May 28, 1830. After meager academic training young Teller studied law and was admitted to the bar in January, 1858, at Binghamton, N. Y. For three years he practiced law at Morrisville, N. Y.

Came to Colorado in 1861.

In 1861 he crossed the plains with an ox team and located at Central City, Colo., at that time the first city of the territory. In the rough mining camp Teller had four companions, such men as George M. Pullman, Henry M. Stanley, the explorer; William A. Clark, who subsequently became United States senator from Montana.

Teller opened a law office and at once became referee in disputes over mining claims. The rough "rules and customs" of lode mining as amplified by Teller were recognized as furnishing the title to mining claims and became the basis of federal legislation in 1863 governing mining.

In 1863-1864 Teller served as major general of the territorial militia and participated in campaigns against the Indians. He aided in promoting and building the Colorado Central railroad from Central City to Denver in 1865 and until his death continued to take an active part in the industrial and commercial development of Colorado.

Democrat in early life, Teller joined the Republican party on its organization. He took an active part in the campaign which resulted in the admission of Colorado to statehood in 1876 and was elected United States senator for the first assembly which convened November 1 that year. He was reelected for the term beginning March 4, 1887, and served in the senate until called for appointment to a cabinet position by President Arthur in 1882.

Retired in 1909.

Upon retiring from the cabinet in 1909 Teller was reelected to the senate and served continuously until 1909. During his career in the upper branch of congress Senator Teller served as chairman of the committee on foreign relations, patents, mines and mining and as member of the committees on Indian affairs, railroads, judiciary, public lands and appropriations.

Senator Teller fought the demonetization of silver in 1877. For years he was one of the leading advocates of bimetallism and his convictions finally led to a break with the Republican party in 1888 when he led the silver bolt from the national convention after the adoption of the gold standard plank. His return to Colorado from that convention was marked by a public welcome which surpassed any previous tribute ever accorded any public man in Colorado. From that time Senator Teller acted with the Democratic party but notwithstanding his change of politics he continued to be one of the recognized leaders of the senate.

Senator Teller was a Thirty-third degree Mason and for seven years was grand master of the order in Colorado. He also served as first grand commander of the Knights Templar in the state.

Senator Teller was married June 7, 1862, to Harriet M. Bruce of Allegany county, New York. Three children, John Harrison and Henry Bruce Teller, of Central City and Mrs. E. T. Tyler of Denver survive him.

PHONE GIRL AIDS POLICE

CAPTURE A MURDERER

CORNING, N. Y. Feb. 23.—Harry Edwards, night clerk in the Wells Fargo Express company's office here, was murdered early today by a burglar, alleged to have been David Dunn, 19 years old, a former employee of the company. The police say Dunn has confessed. Prompt discovery of the crime and arrest of the alleged murderer was due to the quick wit of Miss Carrie Niles, a central telephone operator. When a call came over the express office line, and she could get no response, she requested for a number, she learned.

Miss Niles notified the police, and when the officer arrived at the express office he found Edwards dead.

I MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

E A GLASS OF SALTS IF OUR KIDNEY HURTS OR BY AD-
DER TROUBLES YOU

man or woman who eats meat early can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally," says a known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they are overworked from the strain, languish and fail to filter the waste poisons from the blood, then we sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dissatisfaction, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

A moment you feel a dull ache in kidneys or your back hurts or if urine is cloudy, offensive, full of fatty irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop meat and get about four ounces of salts from any pharmacy; take one spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your eyes will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes lemon juice, combined with lithia, has been used for generations to cleanse and stimulate the kidneys, also neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Salt is inexpensive and cannot be made; makes a delightful after-meal mid-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the body clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications. Adv.

HENDERSON, AT UTAH ROAD MEETING, BOOSTS HIGHWAY

Pikes Peak Route Receives Impetus at Salt Lake; Papers Get Behind
New Movement

"Colorado roads, especially 'The Pikes Peak Route,' are getting much advertising through the personal work of Secretary F. W. A., a son of the local Chapter of the Order, and Austin Gavin of Glenwood Springs, who are attending the meeting of the Utah Good Roads association at Salt Lake City. The Salt Lake papers are giving a good deal of space to the meetings and the movement for a national transcontinental highway seemingly will gather much impetus at the gathering. The Salt Lake Tribune praises editorially, in Sunday morning's paper, the work of the good road enthusiasts in Colorado and urges that Utah do as much for the movement as this state has done. In addition to the editorial, the Tribune carried the following account of the speeches made by Henderson and Gavin.

Austin Gavin and A. W. Henderson of Colorado Springs, president and secretary of the Pikes Peak Transcontinental High association, addressed the good roads committee of the Commercial club yesterday afternoon, urging that Utah cooperate with Colorado in making the Pikes Peak highway success.

The speakers pointed out that a direct route across the continent from the Atlantic coast to the Utah line had been selected by the association, and they wanted this state to designate a route across Utah. R. G. Collett of Roseville, who was also before the committee, urged that a route through the rich Uintah basin be selected.

An entrance to Utah through this valley, the Colorado men said, would be satisfactory to them. They suggested that a route from Rifle, Colo., north to Meeker and then west into Utah and through the Uintah basin to a point on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad near Colton, then into Salt Lake, would prove feasible and attractive.

The proposed highway across Colorado, Mr. Gavin and Mr. Henderson said, would take the transcontinental tourist through the heart of the scenery of the Rocky mountains in Colorado and Utah and at the same time form a safe route where roads could be constructed, improved and maintained at a reasonable cost.

POLICE TO TAKE STEPS TO PREVENT SIDEWALK RIDING

Chief of Police N. D. Burno an-children under 16 years of age who are arrested for riding on the sidewalk warnings have been ineffective, and the youngsters cannot be tried in police court.

"Riding on the sidewalk is a dangerous practice," said Chief Burno,
"and this department is going to put a stop to it. Scarcely a day passes that two or three offenders are not tried in

Manager Walter Coburn of the Zoo

under way at the park for the improve-storm, will be rebuilt. A much-needed improvement in the baseball field will be the cutting out of the trees in the outfield and the construction of a culvert over the ditch that runs there.

The entire field will be graded and new players' benches and press stands constructed. A new and larger park for the auto will also be built.

According to Mr. Coburn the baseball season at the park will not open as

February Nearly Done for

Five days only remain to better results of February. We never expect much of it, anyway, and it's the month of all months we could very well do without.

From a business standpoint it's at best only an imitation of the real thing—a connecting link between the real ending and beginning of the business seasons—A hesitation. A catch in your breath. An obviated uncertainty, lacking in duration, character and stability.

It's called a month end sales with it all the regular expenses of one, without a particle of reducing its necessary attending obligations.

EVEN AT LAST

We have no serious kick coming on the way we were treated so far, and if we can only crowd in a little more additional interest, energetic enough to induce a little more shopping at our place during the last 5 days, we know we can improve the sales enough to end up February in a fairly satisfactory manner.

AUTHOR OF THE "GOOD OLD SONGS"

— G. A. White, Writer of OLD-TIME SONGS

— St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Musical organizations in every state in the Union are making arrangements to fittingly commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Stephen C. Foster, author of a score of pretty southern songs.

"Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe" and "My Cabin in de Cold, Cold Ground" were among Foster's most popular melodies.

Cincinnati, the city in which some of Foster's most notable songs were written, was the originator of the semi-centennial celebration.

Foster was the most noted song writer of his day. While he made a fortune out of his songs, he died almost in poverty. His last days were spent in New York.

He would write and compose a song in the morning, sell it in the afternoon and spend the proceeds in dissipation before night. In January, 1864, while ill with fever in a cheap hotel, he rose during the night for a drink of water—was so weak that he fell, striking on a broken pitcher. He gashed his neck and lay on the floor unconscious all night. He was taken to the Bellevue hospital, where he died from fever and loss of blood on January 18.

His identity not being known at the hospital, his body lay for a time in the morgue, where friends finally traced it and prevented the composer of so many sweet and tender melodies from being buried as a pauper.

Even had Stephen Foster left behind nothing but "Old Kentucky Home" he would remain dear to all Americans. In addition, one of his biographers gives the following list of his most familiar songs: "Beautiful Dreamer," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," "Don't Bet Your Money on the Shanghai," "Gentle Annie," "Hard Times Come No More," "I See Her Still in My Dreams," "Jenny June," "Laura Lee," "Louisiana Bell," "Marry's in de Cold, Cold Ground," "Nelly Was a Lady," "Nellie Bly," "Old Dog Tray," "Oh, Boys, Call Me Long," "Old Black Joe," "Oh, Nelly Nank," "Under the Willows She's Sleeping," "Uncle Ned," "Virginia Belle," "Willie, We Have Missed You," and "When the Devil War is Over."

Stephen Collins Foster came of good family. His father was a general merchant in Pittsburgh, dispatching goods on flatboats down river to New Orleans. Of the other children, in addition to the songwriter, one died as recently as 1894, a son of no little means. Another was the first vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, while a daughter married a brother of President Buchanan; and her own daughter is the wife of the president of another great American railway, Henrietta Croswell, whose full name is Henrietta Foster, is another direct descendant, being a granddaughter of Stephen Foster, the author of the songs.

July 4, 1826, while the band outside the Foster home at Lawrenceville, now a part of Pittsburg, was playing for the national holiday, Stephen Foster was born. At 8 he would pick out harmonies on his father's guitar; at 9 he played flute, and, soon after, piano. At 16 he had published a song.

During from the school days Foster entered his brother Dunlap's office in Cincinnati as an errand boy, and while there he wrote his "Oh, Susanna!" He had not yet learned to music professionally, and so we find that he gave this and another song to a friend, who cleared $10,000 from them and laid the found-dation of his business upon them.

Foster was a small man, proud and sensitive, but brave when need be. Soon after his marriage, in 1850 to the daughter of a Pittsburgh physician, a flattering offer from publishers took him to New York. Homesickness, however, carried him back and only after the separation from his wife did he return anew to the metropolis.

By that time, according to the biographers, the bad habits had taken their hold and the beginning of the end had come. The tragedy of his death, just a half century ago, however, seemed not to have dimmed theuster of his glory in the slightest, and so Foster day is being exploited by the country about.

"There is no use of feeding people scientifically and neglecting the tasty side of the meal," said Miss Amy Louise Daniels of the home economics department in a recent lecture on "The Daily Menu."

In the olden times kings enjoyed all the luxuries, but the luxuries of kings do not compare with the ordinary citizen of to day who goes to a first-class hotel.

Outside the hotel Mr. Ordinary Citizen may black his own shoes, shave himself, carry his own suit case and help his wife wash the dishes, but once inside he is pounced upon by bell boys in all the regalia men have been able to devise since the abandonment of fig leaves as an article of wearing apparel. These boys take away the man's suit cases and all but carry him to the desk where he is registered.

When a man registers he does not even have to dip his pen in the ink. The clerk does that for him. The guest is then escorted to his room where he can have anything he wants by just saying so and paying the price.

In the dining room he is served by humble waiters who act as though they never were so honored as when waiting on this particular guest. The waiters also keep their eyes open for tips.

But the service rendered is only a small part of the luxury of the modern hotel. Imagine King Henry VIII taking a bath in a tub where all he would have to do would be to turn a faucet and get hot or cold water as he desired. Ancient Greece, Rome, and Egypt are supposed to have been places of great beauty. Their palaces were beyond comparison with anything in any other country at their time; but at that time there were no modern hotels.

One of the newest hotels is the Biltmore Hotel, New York. Elbert Hubbard went into ecstasy over the Biltmore. Like every other hotel of its kind the Biltmore has endeavored to outdo its rivals, so it may be taken as a type of hotel. Besides, according to Hubbard this hotel is somewhat different from the rest. He says:

"If you arrive from New England or upon the New York Central lines, the ease with which you can go to The Biltmore will be the first thing that gives you a thrill of delight. You eliminate cab drivers, guides, and the slogan 'Safety First' is superfluous. You cross no streets, run into no contingencies of traffic."

"When you alight from your train at the Grand Central Station you hand your bag to a Red Cap and say, 'The Biltmore.' In about half a second your bag is deposited in a luxurious elevator and in what seems to be half a second more the elevator stops and you are in the office of the hotel."

TRAVEL THROUGH UNDERGROUND TUBES.

"How did you get here?" It is one of the modern mysteries. If you come to New York by other routes than those named, the location is so central that you are but a few moments from station or port. Travelling on a railroad train will some day be a thing of the past, they'll put us in a little little airplane. In a few minutes the car and somehow will press a button and before we can react our motor will stop our forces will be gone.

So you start to go down at the Grand Central and the car goes up and down, do not realize when it stops and comes to travel further. It is not because it travels horizontally.

"Here is where we travel faster and faster to myself I haven't worked it out yet. I only know that I said Biltmore to a blind-faced dark complexioned lad and he put me in an elevator and I arrived in the office.

"There was no fighting for my baggage, no anxiety, no jostling. At the office there was no crowding around the desk because one clerk does not wear his nerves to a frazzle trying to take care of all the guests, you can register at one of several places. The office is beautiful through its absence of gilt, gold glare and gaudy fussiness."

"Brass buttons were not the most prominent feature on the raiment of the bellboys. The clerk wore no diamond pin. I really do not remember how he looked—he faded into the landscape like a brown thrush in the autumn foliage. The lights of the corridors and office were soft, warm, evenly distributed—and that's another thing I didn't know and don't know yet. Is where that light comes from? And I found this wonderful lighting was in all of the rooms in the hallways and even in the elevators."

"There are lots of things that I don't know and one of them is how elevators that run up through fifteen stories have electric lights."

This country is certainly passing out of the pioneer stage of bustle and bustle, rush and dash and sham.

NO CROWD AMONG THREE THOUSAND PERSONS.

I was told that there were in the hotel when I was there over 3,000 people but I ran into no crowd.

There is in the office of the hotel an arrangement which shows when a servant is at work in a room. At the rule of the hotel that guest is present in a room when one of the servants in there. This is arranged by a little system of flashlights.

"There is the tele-autograph system which conveys written messages from one part of the hotel

THREE interior views of the Hotel Biltmore.

to another, the dictaphone system, and, of course, the regular telephone.

"There are pneumatic tubes that carry laundry bundles and a vacuum cleaning service that picks up the dust and carries it out."

"Every known device has been installed by which dust is kept out of the hotel and a scientist of note tells me that the atmosphere in any of the rooms—office, dining room, buffets, retiring rooms or bedrooms—would show a far greater purity from the microbes of dust and bacteria of disintegration than outside air even in the country, unless it were immediately after a great fall of snow. Thus it really looks as if when we want to get absolutely sanitary conditions in future, we will have to go to the city and not to the country."

BIGGEST MEN IN LEADING WORK.

"The big work of the world has always engaged the genius of the biggest men."

"When war was the most important thing in the world the big men were warriors and so ancient history swines around the men who could kill and destroy most."

Time goes on and we find the big men of the world are painters or sculptors. Men like Michael Angelo who was the biggest intellect of his time. Also Frederic Leonard, scientist engineer architect, writing poetry, painting pictures, modeling statuary. And about the same time in different parts of the world, there were men explorers. They sailed the seas in search of unknown shores and we original and remarkable observations to make regarding every phase of immorality. She says:

"Let us not merely defend ourselves against this awful evil, but let us take the offensive and go out and fight the monster which otherwise will destroy every fiber of morality in the world."

"Many girls of the streets are not forced into such a life through poverty. Girls of the best families, with beautiful homes and families, are not secure. Many of them have confided to me that it was the lure of the bright lights the intoxicating music, and the merry tinkle of glasses all made so attractive by commercial enterprise that drew them to batter soul and body."

"Therefore, since none of our girls is safe from the lure, we must really censor every cafe, theater, or sauna. We must make them clean, or close them."

"Next, we ought to establish clean, wholesome places where young girls and young men can meet for social intercourse, a legitimate craving of youth."

"And last, there should be many matrons of the streets in every city, Thousands of kindly women will volunteer for this work, I know."

I must go be main wife's fun. She dies yesterday."

After a lapse of a few days Jake again approached his boss a day off.

"All right, Jake, but what you going to do this time?"

"Aber, I go to make me mit mi frulein a wedding."

"What, so soon? Why it's been three weeks since you buried your wife."

"Ach," replied Jake, "but i hold spite long."

MATRON OF THE STREETS, IS TITLE BESTOWED ON BOSTON SOCIETY WOMAN WHO HELPS GIRLS IN DISTRESS

"Matron of the Streets."

This is the unusual title Boston has bestowed upon Mrs. Thomas H. Tyler a society woman who, it has just been discovered, is using all her time in working to save her sisters from the dark, cavernous abyss of the world's kind of slavery.

She has left high social circles and has become a friend of every submerged girl and woman in this city—no matter to what depth she may have sunk! And, transcending all else, she is bringing each one of them as equal!

Mrs. Tyler, gaudy head, does not write in or "discouraging" charity" or "rescue" work. Equality is the keynote of her method.

"She saw I was her friend, not a fraud, with even worse design behind friendly proffers." Is this "Mother of hundreds" explanation of her repeated successes in dragging one fallen girl after another out of the deadly morsels of prostitution?

Boston's "Matron of the Streets" goes forth either day or night from her handsome home in Back Bay's most exclusive residence section, into hideous, unfrequented alleys, into the loathsome, gaudy tramping place caf et theatre, and dance halls—wherever her work may call her.

Her only badge is human kindness and tender sympathy. It radiates from her and is her great asset in securing the confidence of girls whose shattered illusions have inbred in them a deep distrust of every fellow being.

And she brings back to her comfortable home the girls who have no place to go, or who, if they have, cannot, and there she installs them as one of "her family."

After six months actual fighting of what is perhaps our greatest national problem, Mrs. Tyler has some

"But today the great modern prophets are architects, electricians, builders, railroad men, manufacturers, distributors. He who writes the history of our time must deal with these.

"All of the water used for bathing purposes is soft water, the water being filtrated by the Permutit system, a wonderful device evolved by German brains the brains that produce music, philosophy and scientific nucleus. By this system all of the mineral salts that may be in the water are removed, and nothing is added, so we have rain water just as you would catch it in the clouds if you went up in a balloon and got it for yourself before it was contaminated by the atmosphere.
